

SPO

No heir e'er drove to fine a coach;
The spokes, we are by Ovid told,
Were silver, and the axle gold. Swift.
SPOKE. The preterite of spoke. Sprat.
They spoke best in the glory of their conquest.
SPOKEN. Participle passive of spoke.
Wouldst thou be spoken for to the king? 2 Kings iv. 13.
The original of these signs for communication is found in viva voce, in spoken language. Held's Elements of Speech.
SPOKESMAN. n. f. [spoke and man.] One who speaks for another.
'Tis you that have the reason.
—To do what?
—To be a spokesman from madam Silvia: Shakespeare.
He shall be thy spokesman unto the people. Ex. iv. 16.
TO SPOIL. v. a. [spolio, Lat.] To rob; to plunder. Dist.
SPOILATION. n. f. [spoliation, French; spoliatio, Latin.] The act of robbery or privation.
An ecclesiastical benefice is sometimes void de jure & facto, and sometimes de facto, and not de jure; as when a man suffers a spoliation by his own act. Ayliffe's Parergon.
SPONDÉE. n. f. [spondée, French; spondæus, Latin.] A foot of two long syllables.
We see in the choice of the words the weight of the stone, and the striving to heave it up the mountain: Homer clogs the verse with spondees, and leaves the vowels open. Broom.
SPONDYLE. n. f. [σπονδυλῆς; spondilis, Fr. spondylus, Latin.]
A vertebra; a joint of the spine.
It hath for the spine or back-bone a cartilaginous substance, without any spondyles, processes, or protuberances. Brown.
SPONGE. n. f. [spongia, Latin.] A soft porous substance supposed by some the nidus of animals. It is remarkable for sucking up water.
Sponges are gathered from the sides of rocks, being as a large but tough mors. Bacon.
They opened and washed part of their sponges. Sandys.
Great officers are like sponges: they suck 'till they are full, and, when they come once to be squeezed, their very heart's blood come away. L'Estrange.
TO SPONGE. v. a. [from the noun.] To blot; to wipe away as with a sponge.
Except between the words of translation and the mind of Scripture itself there be contradiction, very little difference should not seem an intolerable blemish necessarily to be sponged
out. Hooker.
TO SPONGE. v. n. To suck in as a sponge; to gain by mean arts.
The ant lives upon her own honesty; whereas the fly is an intruder, and a common smell-feast, that sponges upon other people's trenchers. L'Estrange.
Here went the dean, when he's to feck,
To sponge a breakfast once a week. Swift.
SPONGER. n. f. [from sponge.] One who hangs for a maintenance on others.
A generous rich man, that kept a splendid and open table, would try which were friends, and which only trencher-flies and spongers. L'Estrange.
SPONGINESS. n. f. [from sponge.] Softness and fulness of cavities like a sponge.
The lungs are exposed to receive all the droppings from the brain: a very fit cistern, because of their sponginess. Harvey.
SPONGIOUS. adj. [spongiosus, French; from sponge.] Full of small cavities like a sponge.
All thick bones are hollow or spongy, and contain an oleaginous substance in little vesicles, which by the heat of the body is exhaled through these bones to supply their fibres. Chey.
SPONGY. adj. [from sponge.]
1. Soft and full of small interstitial holes.
The lungs are the most spongy part of the body, and therefore ablest to contract and dilate itself. Bacon's Nat. History.
A spongy excrecence growth upon the roots of the later-tree, and upon cedar, very white, light, and friable, called agarick. Bacon's Natural History.
The body of the tree being very spongy within, though hard without, they easily contrive into canoes. More.
Into earth's spongy veins the ocean sinks,
Those rivers to replenish which he drinks. Denham.
Return, unhappy fwain!
The spongy clouds are fill'd with gath'ring rain. Dryden.
Her bones are all very spongy, and more remarkably those of a wild bird, which flies much, and long together. Grew.
2. Wet; drenched; soaked; full like a sponge.
When their drenched natures lie as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon Th' unguarded Duncan? What not put upon His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt. Shakespeare.
SPONK. n. f. A word in Edinburgh which denotes a match, or any thing dipt in sulphur that takes fire: as, any sponks will ye buy? Touchwood.
SPONSAL. adj. [sponsalis, Latin.] Relating to marriage.
SPONSION. n. f. [sponsio, Latin.] The act of becoming surety for another.

SPO

SPONSOR. n. f. [Latin.] A surety; one who makes a promise or gives security for another.
In the baptism of a male there ought to be two males and one woman, and in the baptism of a female child two women and one man; and these are called sponsors or sureties for their education in the true Christian faith. Ayliffe's Parergon.
The sponsor ought to be of the same station with the person to whom he becomes surety. Itome.
SPONTANEITY. n. f. [spontaneitas, school Lat. spontaneus, Fr.
from spontaneus.] Voluntaryness; willingness; accord un-compelled.
Necessity and spontaneity may sometimes meet together, so may spontaneity and liberty; but real necessity and true liberty can never. Bramb. against Hobbs.
Strict necessity they simple call;
It so binds the will, that things foreknown
By spontaneity not choice are done. Dryden.
SPONTANEOUS. adj. [spontaneus, French; from sponte, Lat.]
Voluntary; not compelled; acting without compulsion or restraint; acting of itself; acting of its own accord.
Many analogical motions in animals, though I cannot call them voluntary, yet I see them spontaneous; I have reason to conclude, that these are not simply mechanical. Hale.
They now came forth
Spontaneous; for within them spirit mov'd Attendant on their lord. Milton.
While John for nine-pins does declare,
And Roger loves to pitch the bar,
Both legs and arms spontaneous move,
Which was the thing I meant to prove. Prior.
Begin with fence, of ev'ry art the fount,
Parts answering parts shall slide into a whole;
Spontaneous beauties all around advance,
Start ev'n from difficulty, strike from chance,
Nature shall join you, time shall make it grow. Pope.
SPONTANEOUSLY. adv. [from spontaneous.] Voluntarily; of its own accord.
This would be as impossible as that the lead of an edifice should naturally and spontaneously mount up to the roof, while lighter materials employ themselves beneath it. Bentley.
When turns spontaneously acid, and the curd into cheese as hard as a stone. Arbutnot on Alimant.
SPONTANEOUSNESS. n. f. [from spontaneous.] Voluntaryness; freedom of will; accord unforced.
The sagacities and instincts of brutes, the spontaneousness of many of their animal motions, are not explicable without supposing some active determinate power connected to and inherent in their spirits, of a higher extraction than the bare natural modification of matter. Hale's Origin of Alimant.
SPOOL. n. f. [spool, German; spool, Dutch.] A small piece of cane or reed, with a knot at each end; or a piece of wood turned in that form to wind yarn upon; a quill.
TO SPOON. v. n. [Probably from spume, or foam, as a ship driven with violence spumes, or raises a foam.]
When virtue spoons before a prosperous gale,
My heaving wishes help to fill the sail. Dryden.
SPOON. n. f. [spoon, Dutch; spone, Danish; spoon, Islandic.]
A concave vessel with a handle, used in eating liquids.
Wouldst thou drown thyself,
Put but a little water in a spoon,
And it shall be as all the ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villain up.
This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon. Shakespeare's Tempest.
Or o'er cold coffee trifle with the spoon,
Count the slow clock, and dine exact at noon. Pope.
SPOONBILL. n. f. [spoon and bill.] A bird.
The shoveller, or spoonbill; the former name the more proper, the end of the bill being broad like a shovel; but not concave like a spoon, but perfectly flat. Grew's Museum.
Ducks and geese have such long broad bills to quaffer in water and mud; to which we may reckon the bill of the spoonbill. Derham's Physico-Theology.
SPOONFUL. n. f. [spoon and full.]
1. As much as is generally taken at once in a spoon. A medical spoonful is half an ounce.
Prescribe him, before he do the receipt, that he take such a pill, or a spoonful of liquor. Shakespeare.
2. Any small quantity of liquid.
Surely the choice and measure of the materials of which the whole body is composed, and what we take daily by pounds, is at least of as much importance as of what we take feldom, and only by grains and spoonfuls. Arbutnot.
SPOONMEAT. n. f. [spoon and meat.] Liquid food; nourishment taken with a spoon.
We prescribed a slender diet, allowing only spoonmeats. Wife.
Wretched
Are mortals born to sleep their lives away!
Go back to what thy infancy began,
Eat pap and spoonmeat; for thy eguags cry,
Be fullen, and refuse the lullaby. Dryden's Pers.

SPO

Diet most upon spoonmeats, as veal, or cock-broths. Harv.
SPOONWORT. n. f. In sea language, is when a ship being under sail in a storm cannot bear it, but is obliged to put right before the wind. Bailey.
SPORADICAL. adj. [σποραδικός; sporadicus, French.]
A sporadic disease is an endemial disease, what in a particular season affects but few people. Arbutnot.
SPORT. n. f. [spott, a make-game, Islandic.]
1. Play; diversion; game; frolic and tumultuous merriment.
Her sports were such as carried riches of knowledge upon the stream of delight. Sidney.
As flies to wanton boys, are we to th' gods;
They kill us for their sport. Shakespeare's K. Lear.
If I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me; then let me be your jest. Shakespeare.
When their hearts were merry, they said, call for Samson, that he may make us sport; and they called for him, and he made them sport. Judge. xvi. 25.
As a mad-man who casteth fire-brands, arrows and death;
so is the man that deceiveth his neighbour, and faith, am not I in sport? Prov. xxvi. 19.
The discourse of fools is irksome, and their sport is in the wantonness of sin. Ecclus xxvii. 13.
2. Mock; contemptuous mirth.
They had his messengers in derision and made a sport of his prophets. 1 Esdr. i. 51.
To make sport with his word, and to endeavour to render it ridiculous, by turning that holy book into rallery, is a direct affront to God. Tillotson's Sermons.
3. That with which one plays.
Each on his rock transfix'd, the sport and prey
Of wrecking whirlwinds. Milton.
Commit not thy prophetick mind
To fitting leaves, the sport of every wind,
Lest they disperse in air. Dryden.
4. Play; idle gingle.
An author who should introduce such a sport of words upon our stage, would meet with small applause. Broom.
5. Diversion of the field, as of fowling, hunting, fishing.
Now for our mountain sport, up to yon hill,
Your legs are young. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
The king, who was excessively affected to hunting, and the sports of the field, had a great desire to make a great park for red as well as fallow deer, between Richmond and Hampton court. Clarendon.
TO SPORT. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To divert; to make merry.
The poor man wept and bled, cried and prayed, while they sported themselves in his pain, and delighted in his prayers as the argument of their victory. Sidney.
Away with him, and let her sport herself
With that she's big with. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.
Against whom do ye sport yourselves? against whom make ye a wide mouth, and draw out the tongue? Isa. lvi. 4.
What pretty stories these are for a man of his seriousness to sport himself withal!
Let such writers go on at their dearest peril, and sport themselves in their own deceivings. Watts.
2. To represent by any kind of play.
Now sporting on thy lyre the love of youth,
Now virtuous age and venerable truth;
Expressing justly Sappho's wanton art
Of odes, and Pindar's more majestic part. Dryden.
TO SPORT. v. n.
1. To play; to frolic; to game; to wanton.
They sporting with quick glance,
Shew to the sun their wav'd coats dropt with gold. Milton.
Larissa, as she sported at this play, was drowned in the river Peneus. Broom's Notes on the Odyssey.
2. To trifle.
If any man turn religion into rallery, by bold jests, he renders himself ridiculous, because he sports with his own life. Tillotson.
SPORTFUL. adj. [sport and full.] Merry; frolic; wanton; ludicrous; done in jest.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge. Shakespeare.
His highness, even in such a slight and sportful damage, had a noble sense of just dealing. Wotton.
Down he alights among the sportful herd
Of those four-footed kinds. Milton.
Behold your own Africanus, while he said,
He drew his glittering helmet from his head,
In which the youth to sportful arms he led. Dryden.
They are no sportful productions of the soil, but did once belong to real and living fishes; seeing each of them doth exactly resemble some other shell on the sea shore. Bentley.
A catalogue of this may be had in Albericus Gentilis; which,
because it is too sportful, I forbear to mention. Baker.
SPORTFULLY. adv. [from sportful.] Wantonly; merrily.
SPORTFULNESS. n. f. [from sportful.] Wantonness; play;
merriment; frolic.

SPO

The otter got out of the river, and inweeded himself so, as the ladies lost the further marking of his sportfulness. Sidney.
SPORTIVE. adj. [from sport.] Gay; merry; frolic; wanton; playful; ludicrous.
I am not in a sportive humour now;
Tell me, and dally not, where is the money? Shakespeare.
Is it I
That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark
Of smoky mullets? Shakespeare's All's well that ends well.
While thus the constant pair alternate said,
Joyful above them and around them play'd
Angels and sportive loves, a numerous crowd, Smiling they clapt their wings, and low they bow'd. Prior.
We must not hope wholly to change their original tempers, nor make the gay, penfive and grave; nor the melancholy, sportive, without spoiling them. Locke.
No wonder savages or subjects slain,
Were equal crimes in a despotick reign;
Both doom'd alike for sportive tyrants bled,
But subjects starv'd while savages were fed. Pope.
SPORTIVENESS. n. f. [from sportive.] Gaiety; play; wantonness.
Shall I conclude her to be simple, that has her time to begin, or refuse sportiveness as freely as I have? Walton's Angler.
SPORTSMAN. n. f. [sport and man.] One who pursues the recreations of the field.
Manilius lets us know the pagan hunters had Meleager for their patron, as the Christians have their St. Hubert: he speaks of the constellation which makes a good sportsman. Addison.
SPORTULE. n. f. [sportule, French; sportula, Latin.] An alms;
a dole.
The bishops, who consecrated the ground, had a spill or sportule from the credulous laity. Ayliffe's Parergon.
SPOTT. n. f. [spette, Danish; spette, Flemish.]
1. A blot; a mark made by discoloration.
This three years day, these eyes, though clear
To outward view of blemish or of spot,
Bereft of sight, their seeing have forgot. Milton.
A long series of ancestors shews the native lustre with advantage; but if he any way degenerate from his line, the least spot is visible on ermine. Dryden.
2. A taint; a disgrace; a reproach.
3. I know not well the meaning of spot in this place, unless it be a scandalous woman; a disgrace to her sex.
Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians;
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex. Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.
4. A small extent of place.
That spot to which I point is paradise,
Adam's abode, those lofty shades his bow'r. Milton.
He, who with Plato, shall place beatitude in the knowledge of God, will have his thoughts raised to other contemplations than those who looked not beyond this spot of earth, and those perishing things in it. Locke.
About one of these breathing passages is a spot of myrtils, that flourish within the steam of these vapours. Addison.
Abdallah converted the whole mountain into a kind of garden, and covered every part of it with plantations or spots of flowers. The Guardian.
He that could make two ears of corn grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind than the whole race of politicians. Gulliver.
5. Any particular place.
I would be busy in the world, and learn,
Not like a coarse and useless dunghill weed,
Fix'd to one spot, and rot just as I grow. Orway.
As in this grove I took my last farewell,
As on this very spot of earth I fell,
So the my prey becomes ev'n here. Dryden.
Here Adrian fell: upon that fatal spot
Our brother died. Granville.
6. Upon the spot. Immediately; without changing place.
[Sur le champ.]
The lion did not chop him up immediately upon the spot;
and yet he was resolved he should not escape. L'Estrange.
It was determined upon the spot, according as the oratory on either side prevailed. Swift.
TO SPOT. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To mark with discolorations; to maculate.
They are polluted off-rings, more abhor'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice. Shakespeare.
Have you not seen a handkerchief,
Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand? Shakespeare.
But serpents now more amity maintain;
From spotted skins the leopard does refrain:
No weaker lion's by a stronger slain. Tate's Juvenal.
I counted the patches on both sides, and found the tory patches to be about twenty stronger than the whig; but next morning the whole puppet-show was filled with faces spotted after the whiggish manner. Addison's Spectator.
